Name	Dietary Restriction
Joshua Gubler	I have a walnut allergy, but other nuts are fine
Emily Chen	I'm allergic to shellfish, and I avoid it strictly, but I love fish.
Marcus Lee	I have a gluten sensitivity but can tolerate small amounts without a reaction.
Ava Patel	I can't have dairy products; lactose intolerance makes me uncomfortable.
Liam O'Connor	I'm allergic to peanuts and must be careful about food labels.
Sofia Kim	I have a citrus allergy, particularly to oranges and lemons, which makes summer tricky.
Noah Albright	I react to certain artificial colors, so I prefer natural food coloring.
Emma Rodriguez	I'm allergic to soy and always check for it in processed foods.

"Because We Shared Topaz": Shared Identity and Interracial Memory of an Internment Camp School

This study applies Brubaker's (2006) concept of "groupness" to examine how shared experiences, rather than racial categorization, enabled belonging among students at Topaz High School, which operated within the Central Utah War Relocation Center and was attended primarily by Japanese American incarcerees. Drawing on oral histories, correspondence records, and other archival materials, this research found that students at an internment camp high school developed a sense of identity and community (groupness) that transcended racial categorizations. In addition, the study found that historical memory preserves groupness over time as white students are included in the process of collective memory.
