"Because We Shared Topaz": Shared Identity and Interracial Memory of an Internment Camp School

This study applies Brubaker's (2006) concept of "groupness" to examine how shared experiences, rather than racial categorization, enabled belonging among students at Topaz High School, which operated within the Central Utah War Relocation Center and was attended primarily by Japanese American incarcerees. Drawing on oral histories, correspondence records, and other archival materials, this research found that students at an internment camp high school developed a sense of identity and community (groupness) that transcended racial categorizations. In addition, the study found that historical memory preserves groupness over time as white students are included in the process of collective memory.

Additional Awards

Award	Reason
Belonging and Diversity	Study purpose is related to under-represented groups and the data focuses on or is collected from under-represented groups. Please state how your research relates to these requirements. I want to apply for the Belonging and Diversity Additional Award because I value creating environments where people from different backgrounds feel respected, included, and supported. Through service, leadership, and everyday interactions, I strive to build understanding, strengthen community connections, and help others feel that they truly belong.
BYU 150 | Becoming BYU	Study is related to mission-inspired scholarship defined by the following topics: - strengthening families - the impact of religion on human flourishing - the protection constitutional democracy provides family and religion - causes of poverty or strategies to alleviate poverty Please state how your research relates to any of the above requirements. I want to apply for the BYU 150 Becoming BYU Award because BYU has helped me grow academically, spiritually, and personally. I am committed to learning, serving others, and developing Christlike character. This award would recognize my efforts to contribute positively while continuing to pursue meaningful goals.
